Preface

This bibliography has been gathered entirely from secondary sources. This limits it to a first step in the process of filling the gap in American bibliography for the period 1801-1819 inclusive.

Charles Evans originally planned to carry his American Bibliography through 1820. When he died he had completed from the beginnings part way through 1799. The American Antiquarian Society completed the coverage for 1799 and compiled the list for 1800, which was published as volume 13 of the American Bibliography, but concluded that it was not economically feasible to go any further and discontinued its work at that stage.

This twenty year gap in listing of American publications has long been of great concern to scholars and librarians. It is, obviously, difficult to work in any phase of scholarship covering this period without any record of the publications of the period. Poor as are the records for the following period represented by Orville Augustus Roorbach's Bibliotheca Americana (1820-1861) and James Kelly's American Catalog... (1861-1871) they provide some guidance to the contemporary materials. Despite the fact that they contain many errors and cover only a small percentage of what was published in the periods covered, and do not locate copies, the Roorbach and Kelly works have been of constant utility to scholars for approximately 100 years.

There has been a great deal of work done on completing and perfecting the Evans listings to 1800, but the consensus of informed opinion has been that completing Evans American Bibliography was not economically feasible, and that the only possible approach was the compilation of local bibliographies and state lists, which might in time approximate coverage of the whole.

Thus we have the interesting anomaly that on the one hand we have accepted and used the Roorbach and Kelly (which list less than half as many titles per year as Evans does in a much less prolific period, list them less fully and less accurately, and give no location of copies) while we have endeavored so variously and so mightily to improve Evans for the period to 1800 that we have convinced ourselves that there is no hope for covering the period for which we have substantially nothing at all. Truly, may we not have swallowed a bibliographical camel?

While, in common with all others concerned with scholarship and scholarly library services, we decried the incompleteness of our national bibliography, this concern was brought to focus in the work of the American Library Association's Committee on Bibliography, which after study of bibliographical needs decided unanimously that the bibliographical problem of most fundamental importance was that of filling this gap in our national bibliography. At about that time the American Library Association received an invitation from the American Historical Association to form a joint committee to pursue the problem of completing Evans. As Chairman of the Bibliography Committee of the ALA the senior compiler of this work was appointed to serve on the joint committee under the chairmanship of Professor Fulmer Mood of the University of Texas, representing the American Historical Association. The joint committee was a meeting of kindred minds that soon concluded that something had to be done about this. Since the whole task at the level of quality ultimately desired was obviously too formidable in the absence of massive financial support, we explored ways to approach the solution. Based on Professor Mood's conviction that anything done to ameliorate this crippling deterrent to historical scholarship would be better than nothing, and any list, no matter how inadequate, would be better than the current dearth of bibliographical equipment for this important period of our history, we decided that the logical approach was the preparation of a preliminary check list in which we would include all of the titles that could be culled from printed sources, library lists, library catalogs, rare book inventories and similar sources. As a second step in assuring feasibility we agreed that the work might well be subdivided into chronological periods, with coverage of five year intervals to be our goal, starting with the period 1801-1805. In due course, this approach received the blessings of the ALA Committee on Bibliography and the American Historical Association, and all that remained was to get the job done.

Following the normal procedure, we next approached several foundations for support of the work, and obtained enthusiastic moral support. This required recasting of our thinking in other directions if the end was to be achieved and the next step was a reappraisal of the situation in terms of a cooperative venture with much of the work to be contributed by volunteers. Discussion with a number of librarians indicated that a certain number would be willing to contribute labor to this venture, and that others could make their library files and inventories available. When Clifford K. Shipton, Librarian of the American Antiquarian Society, compiler of the 1799-1800 Evans, and inheritor of the wand, offered to lend the American Antiquarian Society records of some 20,000 items for 1801-1819, the project was launched. The generosity of Mr. F. R. St. John and his staff at the Brooklyn Public Library in copying the American Antiquarian Society files on their Photoclerk gave substance to the project. Next Mr. Wyllis Wright, Librarian of Williams College, had all their holding records copied for us and Mr. David Jonah, Librarian of Brown University and Benjamin Powell, Librarian of Duke, made their imprints inventories available, and the file gathered range. Mr. Lewis M. Stark, Chief of the Reserve Department of the New York Public Library generously arranged to make their massive imprints inventory available to us during hours when the rare book room in which it is housed is not open, and a group of volunteers was recruited to check our holdings for the period 1801-1805 against that file. Mr. Shoemaker entered the scene at this point as one of the volunteers to check the New York Public Library inventory, and undertook this work with such zeal and industry that he soon became a full partner in the undertaking, as indicated by the title page. The people who have contributed to this work are too numerous to list, but our thanks go out to all of them. Among the others who must be given special credit, however, because the job would have been impossible without their help are Mr. George Schwegmann, Head of the Union Catalog Division of the Library of Congress, who overcame all difficulties in making it possible for us to work the vast files of the WPA Imprints Inventory at the Library of Congress, Mr. Fred W. Shipman, Librarian of the Department of State and Col. Frank B. Rogers, Librarian of the National Library of Medicine for the loan of their Photoclerks for use at the Library of Congress, and Foster Mohrhardt and his staff at the U.S. Department of Agriculture Library for their technical assistance in processing the copies and in training the operators of the cameras.

The Rutgers Research Fund made a grant to enable Mr. Shoemaker to spend a summer in Washington culling the file of 1801-1805 imprints in the WPA Imprints Inventory.

Having checked the original American Antiquarian Society records against the New York Public Library inventory, the WPA Imprints inventory, the library shelf-lists noted above and others, we next proceeded to check against records of government publications and published state and local imprints lists, as well as some unpublished lists, such as that for Illinois so generously provided by Mr. Cecil Byrd, Associate Librarian of the University of Indiana, in advance of publication of his own work.

It soon developed that we were passing the point of diminishing returns for a preliminary checklist. Inventory after inventory, involving the checking of thousands of items, produced only one or two new or variant titles, or a few additional locations for items for which we had several locations. We therefore decided that the time had come to call a halt.

Then the laborious work of editing our copy started. This task took will power. In editing, all the way through the printers proof we were haunted by probable errors, which could not be checked without examining the originals. But once we started to examine originals we would not be content until all had been checked -- the very trap that has so long kept us from having any kind of a list in this field. We, therefore, in the interest of producing a preliminary edition, which whatever its demerits does present a large part of the output of American presses for the year 1801-1805, steadfastly refrained from going to the originals.

The entries are uneven in quality. In each case in which two or more entries were available, the best one was selected, or the best features of the group were merged into the entry here presented. In many cases similarities in the entry indicated that two entries represented one edition of a book; when the similarities were great it was assumed that the two represented a single work, and some printings or editions may have wrongly been omitted. On the other hand, when two entries were found in reasonably reliable sources in which as much as the number of pages differed, they were included, and some editions listed here may upon examination of the originals be found to be but one edition expanded to two by faulty copies, faulty cataloging or faulty transcription. Since the entries were drawn from many sources where they were prepared for differing conditions, the content of the entries varies widely. By and large, all pertinent information that was found in any of the sources was included except for size of the volume in overall or fold measurement. Where no publisher, place or date was found that is evidenced by their absence from the entry, and the further admonitions n.p., n.d. etc., are omitted. Bibliographic collations have been omitted, and only the number of volumes is given if more than one, or the total number of pages, if available, for single volumes. Author's dates were copied if included in the entries received but no search was made to verify them. Long subtitles are omitted, and, in general, the title is limited to sufficient information to differentiate the item from any other in this bibliography.

Printers and publishers are included where available, when not otherwise designated in the imprint the name is that of the publisher so far as could be determined from the information at hand. Many books printed by a single printer indicated that they were simultaneously marketed by multiple publishers in multiple places; these are considered single editions and are entered once only, under the first place and publisher listed. Some may have been erroneously entered as different editions because they were cataloged as having been published in a second or third place, without enough information to tie them to the original printer and publisher.

The differences in form of entry has resulted in a substantial number of duplications of titles under different entries. When found these were eliminated (even up to the printer's copy as indicated by items marked "no entry" and those indicated as possibly duplicating other entries in other parts of the alphabet). Nevertheless, pending preparation of author and title indexes, which are being held back until completion of the series through 1819 in order to expedite the publication of the preliminary check list, many have unquestionably slipped through.

Generally speaking, all locations that have been found are included in the citations. However, some sources which would unquestionably provide additional locations have not been searched because it appeared unlikely that they would do more than provide an occasional additional location for items for which adequate location appeared available. In general it was attempted to provide two or more locations for each item. A few, alas, could not be located. For these a bibliographical citation is provided if one was available. Bibliographical citations were omitted when library locations were at hand. The location symbols used are those of the National Union Catalog, with the exception of a few that were taken over from the WPA Imprints Inventory when no Union Catalog abbreviation appeared in its published list.

Rather special effort was made to include government documents, and a considerable percentage are included.

Unfortunately, little could be found for 1805 and some other periods.

While this check list is intended to make the first step towards filling the gap in American bibliography, it is not, strictly speaking, being done on the same basis as Evans' work. For example, in addition to the differences in method and policy noted above, several other changes have been made. Newspapers and periodicals are entered once only in this list as compared with Evans practice of listing them again in each year in which they appeared. Similarly, multivolume works issued over a period of years, when identifiable from the information at hand, are listed once only here under the year in which the first volume appeared rather than listing each volume under its own year. Almanacs and similar annuals, which are separate publications, are, however, listed here each year as in Evans.

As this volume goes to press, it takes with it the volumes for 1802, 1803, 1804 and 1805. Work on the volumes for 1806 through 1819 is well underway, with some thirty thousand slips, representing perhaps 17,000 or 18,000 titles, in hand. The Washington, D.C. Chapter of the Junior Members' Round Table of the American Library Association is culling the remainder of the WPA Imprints Inventory at the Library of Congress. When that is done, we shall go on with the New York Public Library Imprints inventory and the others now in hand, and the printed inventories, after which it is planned to issue preliminary checklists for 1806 through 1819.

Here some years after the inception of the program, and some thousands of man-hours and dollars later, we present the first faltering footsteps towards provision of an American Bibliography for the years 1801-1819. If enough users over the next generation find it helpful and send in corrections to perfect our citations, lay our ghosts, and fill in our gaps, this may in time lead to the fulfillment of our need for a comprehensive and reliable national bibliography.
